

Motivation often matters more in life than intelligence.

the chetan bhagat motivation series

Hello there,

Thank you for considering me as a motivational speaker. Even after doing this for the past few years, I still find this element of my job description amusing.

I am not a full time speaker. I am primarily a writer- whether it is writing books, films or columns. Me becoming a speaker happened as an accident. I was asked to give a speech at Symbiosis University, Pune to the incoming batch of students. I gave a speech called 'Sparks', and put up the text on my blog. Somehow the speech connected with people, spread and became viral. It also gave me a new career as a speaker.

Today, after conducting over 300 talks across more than 75 cities, I can say I have seen the power of motivation.

Intelligence, talent and luck- all their place in success.

However, one of the most important aspects to a successful and happy life or organization is motivation.

The right approach in life, the right thought process and the right goals can make an individual achieve a lot more than they would otherwise. The same applies to a organization. A motivated, happy and bounded workforce with good values can achieve much more.

In this context, I feel fortunate so many organizations have given me a chance to add value to their teams and touch their members lives in a positive manner.

I hope I will be able to do the same to yours.

Regards,

Chetan Bhojra

Topics

The unique point about CB's talks is that each talk is customized after a con call with Mr. Bhagat and the organizers. Here are few popular topics which he has done in the past.

- Leadership
- Motivation
- Values
- Passion
- Six point to achieving success
- Innovation
- Creativity
- Changing the game

The cleverest ideas, smartest strategies, biggest budgets and best laid plans will achieve nothing if your team is not motivated.
